Shakespeare’s Garden: An Immersive Sound Stroll Through His Sonnets, Soliloquies, and Scenes

From Amanda Nelson, Creator and Co-Director; Natasha Staley, Co-Director; Charles Nichols, Composer; Meghan Dee, Motion Graphics and Graphic Designer; and Tanner Upthegrove, Technical Director and Multimedia Technologist:

Explore Shakespeare’s Garden. Visit each of the five installations to hear sonnets, soliloquies, and scenes. Wander the Garden soundscapes and listen to the music of nature. Gaze at the images around you.

Projections incorporate the Shakespeare texts and integrate images and videos relating to the shifting of the seasons—blooming flowers, cool rains, and a windy moonlit evening (visit installations 2, 3, and 4). The typeface used in the projections is Garamond, which was designed by Claude Garamond in 1540 and would have been in widespread use during Shakespeare’s lifetime.

Composer Charles Nichols created each of the four ambient Garden Soundscapes by processing field recordings of nature, including a babbling brook, wind creaking trees, a field of cicadas, a woodpecker pecking, and a robin singing—to create musical harmonies, rhythms, and textures. Nichols also processed a studio recording of a scene between A Midsummer Night’s Dream characters Puck and Fairy, smearing the text to produce a dreamlike conversation that periodically sweeps throughout the Garden Soundscapes using spatial audio.

During the actor rehearsal process, we discovered that by weaving two individual sonnets together they told a new story; listen to a “Sonnet Scene” at installations 2, 3, and 5.

Installation texts are on a continuous loop. You may arrive at a station in the midst of a soliloquy, sonnet, or scene. Linger and stay at the Shakespeare Station to hear the complete texts.
