ABOUT

Torpedo Factory Art Center is housed in a 100-year-old converted munitions plant. It all began the day after Armistice Day, November 12, 1918, marking the official end of World War I. Ironically, on that day, the U.S. Navy began construction on the original building, the U.S. Naval Torpedo Station. Once fully operational, it was responsible for the manufacture and maintenance of Mark III torpedoes for the next five years. The silver torpedo by the Riverfront Entrance is a Mark III. Learn more about the history of the Art Center here: torpedofactory.org/about-us/history

An Alexandria landmark for nearly 50 years, Torpedo Factory Art Center is the highlight of the Potomac Riverfront, attracting approximately 500,000 visitors annually. Find artists creating in a wide variety of media in 71 artists’ studios. Observe the creative process and ask questions. Purchase original work for your own collection.

The mission of the Torpedo Factory Art Center is to foster connections among artists and the public that ignite the creative spirit. We provide dynamic interactions with the arts through our community of visual artists, exhibitions, and programs. We offer art up close, in person, and in progress.
BACKGROUND

Scores of artist communities in converted industrial-type buildings have sprouted globally in the last 50 years; many modeled after Torpedo Factory Art Center. Best practices have evolved and adapted over time and the Art Center is keeping up with them, including the contemporary process of regular re-jurying of Resident Artists. With the Art Center being founded in 1974, many artists have held studios for multiple decades without being reevaluated.

2022 launched the new Open Call process. All artists with a studio at the Art Center are being re-juried over a 3-year period in a process open to new applicants. 2023 was the second year. Founding Artists (had studios in 1974) and their studio mates are not re-juried while the Founding Artist maintains their studio. The Founding Artists’ studios receive year-to-year lease. You may find the 2022 Jury Report and 2023 Jury Report At torpedofactory.org.

THE 2023 JURORS

Kerry Brougher is the former Chief Curator of the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington, D.C., where he also served as Deputy Director and Interim Director. He is the Founding Director of the Academy Museum of Motion Pictures in Los Angeles and the former Director of the Museum of Modern Art Oxford in England; he was a curator at the Museum of Contemporary Art (MOCA) in Los Angeles during its formative years. Brougher has organized numerous exhibitions, including retrospectives and projects by artists such as Doug Aitken, Tacita Dean, Robert Irwin, Yves Klein, Wolfgang Laib, Maria Nordman, Ed Ruscha, Hiroshi Sugimoto, and Jeff Wall. He is known for his numerous thematic exhibitions, many focusing on film and media, and has received numerous awards for his shows and publications. Brougher was the Co-Artistic Director of the 5th Gwangju Biennale in South Korea and is Curator Emeritus at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.
Jaynelle Hazard is the Executive Director and Curator of Tephra Institute of Contemporary Art (Tephra ICA). She has served as Director of Exhibitions at Workhouse Arts Center, supported various art programs such as the corporate contemporary art collection at UBS, and worked with Blank Projects, a contemporary art gallery in Cape Town, South Africa. Jaynelle Hazard holds a Bachelor of Arts from Virginia Commonwealth University and a Master of Arts from Sotheby’s Institute of Art, New York. She currently serves as the Co-Chair for the Washington, D.C. Chapter of Sotheby’s Institute of Art Alumni and on the executive committee for the D.C. Chapter of ArtTable, Inc., a professional organization dedicated to advancing the leadership of women in the visual arts.

Ara Koh is an artist with adjunct professorships at American University, The George Washington University, and Maryland Institute College of Art. Born in Seoul, South Korea, she received her bachelor’s of fine arts in Ceramics and Glass from Hongik University, Seoul, South Korea, and was an exchange student at California State University, Long Beach. Koh graduated with a master’s of fine arts in Ceramic Art at New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University. She received numerous awards including the Minister of Foreign Affairs Honor by the Korean government. Her works are collected by Alfred Ceramic Art Museum, Daekyo Culture Foundation, Winell Corporation in Korea, and many private collectors. She is a current fellow at Hamiltonian Artists in Washington D.C.

Christine Neptune founded Neptune Fine Art in 2001 in NYC after nearly twenty years of professional experience working in auction houses, museums and fine art galleries in Manhattan. In 2011, she opened Gallery Neptune & Brown in Washington D.C. She has collaborated with established artists including Jennifer Bartlett, Vija Celmins, Wolf Kahn, James Siena, Adam Pendleton, Mickalene Thomas, and Jenny Holzer as well as many artists in the Washington DC region. She has placed editions in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C.; The Smithsonian’s National Portrait Gallery, the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, the Baltimore Museum of Art, the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Cincinnati Art Museum, and Los Angeles County Museum of Art. Neptune also works with private collectors to handle discreet and confidential acquisition and sales for clients worldwide.
THE PROCESS

The application was in three (3) phases and worth a total of 100 points.

The Art Center juries for studios; therefore, applications were accepted for individual artists who want a studio or groups of up to four (4) artists that wish to share a studio. Each application was scored as a single applicant, be it an individual application or a group application. Applicants listed their preferred studios should they be accepted. 65% of an application’s score was based on artwork. The remaining 35% of the application was scored on time honored professional artist presentation skills including artist statements, process statements, and artist talks, as well as the artists interest in engaging with the public and working within a community.

+ Phase I considered artistic merit and was judged blind, with jurors only viewing the art. Jurors looked for deliberately crafted artwork with an authentic and original point of view that reflects an awareness of current trends and aesthetics in the larger art world. It was worth a maximum 50 points. The top 60 applicants advanced to Phase II.

+ Phase II was non-blind and considered applicants’ backgrounds. Jurors looked for artists who could explain their art and who wanted to engage and interact with the public through their work. They reviewed applicants’ career highlights and how they have marketed themselves or their work. It was worth a maximum of 25 points. The top 50 applicants advanced to Phase III.

+ Phase III gave the jurors an opportunity to meet and interact with the applicants. This was the first-time jurors saw their artwork in-person, or in a real environment, to review it for quality. Jurors consider the applicants’ ability to communicate about their artwork, with an eye toward their desire to positively engage with the public. It was worth a maximum of 25 points.
Presentations were open to the public. The applicants that scored the highest were offered one of the limited studios available based on their score and studio(s) they requested. If an application completed all three phases and scored a minimum of 60 points but did not score high enough to get a studio, they were offered an Artist Pro Tem position.

The application was based on industry best practices as they relate to current art spaces and artist communities. The application was developed after a series of four (4) Art Center artists forums (discussions with artists) and one (1) community forum held in 2018, as well as a survey with experts in the field and a survey of other arts institutions. The results and analysis of the forums and surveys were shared with Art Center artists. The Art Center is also a member of the Artist Communities Alliance, which provided support in application development. Since 2018, and every year thereafter, the Art Center staff has administered applications for studio leases with outside expert jurors. Over that time, the application has been refined based on experience and feedback.

The 2023 Open Call for Artists at Torpedo Factory Art Center was announced on February 15, 2023, the application went live on March 1, 2023, and applications were due April 18, 2023. Staff held two webinars with potential applicants on how to apply. Additionally, the Office of the Arts offered multiple free professional development webinars for artists in partnership with the New York Foundation for the Arts (NYFA). Seminars included topics such as writing and talking about your art, marketing, and more.

EQUITY AND TRANSPARENCY

EQUITY

Torpedo Factory Art Center holds the notion of working toward a world where we are all embraced for who we are and are able to thrive to reach our highest potential, removing barriers to full participation and belonging in life and culture. Equity means promoting just and fair inclusion throughout our city, and creating the conditions in which everyone can participate, prosper, and reach their full potential.

Torpedo Factory Art Center values a diverse community of artists that reflects representation from different social, economic, and cultural backgrounds, as well as different artistic media, styles, and forms of expression. The Art Center values artists in all stages of their career, regardless of their formal arts training. Therefore, when reviewing applicants’ backgrounds in Phase II, jurors considered the career level of the applicant(s). Applicants’ background should have matched their self-selected career level or exceeded their career level. The Art Center strived to eliminate potential barriers in this application, giving everyone an equitable chance to compete.

SORKAPI, SIERRA BARNES, DIGITAL, 6X9”, 2023.
The City’s Race and Social Equity Officer was consulted while developing the process. ALL Alexandria was used as a starting point. Reasonable accommodations for disability, language translation, and free access to the application was offered. Additionally, in-person presentations were scheduled for a weeknight and weekend day to allow for easier participation. Video and zoom accommodations were offered to artists who could not attend in-person presentations. In the past, artists were selected and had to wait years for the possibility of getting a studio. This new process provides an equitable way of gaining a studio without the wait and provides opportunity for more artists.

The application asked for applicants’ gender identity, disability status, language, ethnicity and/or race, and age. This information was not shared with the Jurors and held no bearing on scores. Applicants also could opt out of answering. Demographic information was published in the 2023 Jury Report found at torpedofactory.org. Jurors were selected to reflect diversity. When marketing the application, special attention was given to universities including HBCUs, organizations such as the Arts Administrators of Color, regional arts publications, and more. The application also offered helpful links including “practices for photographing your artwork,” “resources for writing an artist statement,” and “resources for writing an artist’s resume or CV.” All artists were offered free professional development workshops. At the start of the lease, the studio will have publicly subsidized rent of $17.39 per square foot per year - providing opportunity for more artist.

TRANSPARENCY

Torpedo Factory Art Center is committed to a transparent application process. Of the 2023 Open Call applicants ~ 80% rated the process as fair and transparent and 88% on the ease of the application. The Art Center artists and community members were invited to participate in developing this process. Incumbent artists were given a copy of the standard juror’s agreement with the City. All artists received the scoring criteria. Applicants and spectators were encouraged to attend the in-person application presentations in Phase III where artists presented to jurors.

When requested, applicants received their scores, placement, and written feedback from the jurors.
OUTCOME

27 studios were open for consideration. No studios were added or removed during this process. All studios are granted to eligible artists.

84 artists applied in 80 applications. 29 artists in 27 applications were offered a studio and 20 artists were offered to be an Artist Pro Tem. Leases started on October 1 for returning artists and November 1 for new artists. To become an Artist Pro Tem, applicants had to pass all three phases and score a minimum of 60 out of 100 points. Artists Pro Tem are eligible to sublease, be on the Art Center website, take part in Art Center programming and may obtain a studio should one become available (based on ranking). All incumbent applicants not offered a studio scored high enough to be offered a position as an Artist Pro Tem.

38% BIPOC artists were selected

"I explore worlds of playful adventure through my art. Influence by the cultures of the various places I have lived, by moments during travels, and my early exposure to classic European fairy-tales and folklore. I am fascinated by intricate patterns found in Iznik pottery designs and the lines of woven Celtic knots. My work is my search to express myself from within personal sanctuaries of carved lines in a relief block, the etched surface of a zinc plate, or the paint brushing across canvas. Through my work I want to invoke thought, curiosity, and laughter. The pleasures of laughter and joy bring on a healing release that everyone needs and appreciates."

ARTIST STATEMENT

My work is about the past, living memory, and folklore, and the intersections of those three things. As a storyteller, comics are the medium that most effectively allow me to make history vivid and accessible because they use both images and written words. We live in an age where the erasure of history is leading to the direct harm of living people. I tell stories that dissect harmful historical narratives and bring lesser-known stories to the forefront.

As an artist, I love developing the vast range of artistic skills needed to make comics: writing, drawing, composing panels, arranging panels across pages, and bringing everything together in a way that looks good and tells an understandable story. I draw from my family's Lithuanian roots and Eastern and Central European folk art in my themes and visual motifs, especially animals and mythical creatures. I work to help people to launch their own research into history with empathy and hope in order to learn from those who came before, and make the world a better place for the future.

"Children see the extraordinary in everything. Cracks in the sidewalk become gaping canyons to be crossed. Clouds in the sky are rocks in an upside down tide pool. Everything is a revelation. I’m fascinated by the space between the imagined and the real where children spend so much time, and I seek to capture its richness and potential in my illustration work. Working with a combination of digital and traditional media, I create rich, textured characters and vibrant worlds. I avoid the cartoon smiles and eye-watering colors too often prized by a market that seeks to hold a child’s attention at all costs.

I believe children deserve better - beautiful, intentional artwork and stories with real depth. My hope is that my pictures are a launch pad for the viewer’s own imagination. I strive to represent the diversity of people and the natural world and to do so in a way that allows the viewer to see themselves. Whether that’s a squirrel jamboree or a child curled up with a book, I hope that my work empowers the viewer, regardless of age, to linger in the imagined."

I am contemporary Ottoman miniature (minyatür) artist; who persistently explores subjects of cityscapes, monuments and nature, in a comparable way to how an Ottoman chronicler would attempt to portray our environment today. Motivated by the word “esperanto”, I am committed to preserving the legacy of memories. I depict places that I have lived in, visited and already reside in. I portray cities and nature as I see them today, and the way I want to perceive them, as well as bring into focus the parts that I want the observer to see, and hopefully feel. The miniature painting style helps me embrace contemporary techniques while allowing me to remain loyal to my Turkish cultural roots. My artwork gives a voice to what I can’t convey to my audiences through words: spaces, hope and time that thrive inside and exist around us. Sometimes, it’s not possible to reach these spaces, which are presented through only perspectives. Regardless; my goal has always been to make my work relatable to individuals across the globe, in the hope of building cultural bridges that overcome our divisions and fears. My work stands for hope across domains of adversity.”

I am constantly seeking new ways to express the beauty of nature and the complex environmental issues that surround us. Using encaustic and mixed media, I create abstract landscapes and nature-inspired works that capture the eye and evoke emotion. Often, that emotion triggers questions about what we are doing to nature and how we fit in.

My latest series, ‘Metamorphosis’ uses encaustic, ink and shellac. Changing the essence of the natural media intrigues me. Wax becomes a biomorphic form, ink becomes a complex fissure, because, like humans, nature adapts and modifies. My work explores glacier shrinkage, acid rain, coral bleaching, even the lifecycle and movement of light, growth and decay of the seasons themselves.

Having moved from Scotland to America, my work also reflects on the need for individuals to adapt to their changing climates, environments, and societal pressures. The environment changes the people and the people change the environment. It’s a cyclical process of growth and development that provides an imaginative reflection on a world that is constantly evolving.

“...The scenes of our everyday lives pass us by but often go unnoticed. My paintings search out these tableaus, finding beauty in the mundane: brake lights under the evening sky on a daily commute, industrial buildings on a blue river with the amber glow of the setting sun, and flickering factory lights under an orange moon. Seeing bits of the built environment within the natural landscape interests me. I love the sharp contrast of their crisp edges against the fluid natural landscape. These somewhat oppositional elements can find harmony and balance in a painting. Night scenes are a favorite of mine because of the strong punch of lights against the night sky and the muted somewhat abstract shapes revealed in the diminishing light.

I didn’t start painting till I was in my mid-forties. I first became an architect which has had a large impact on my art by developing a strong sense of color, composition, and pattern. I have found that landscape is an ideal subject to study shape, form, and color, and to transform everyday scenes into something more. Gradually I have developed my own style, which has a contemporary feel, simplifying compositions, and using a consistent mid-tone palette.”

"The primary objective of work presented is the exploration of the "drawn line" and how it can be used to continue my journey of "illustration" from two dimensional pen and ink drawings styles onto three dimensional forms of handmade ceramics, then to further development with the mixture of ceramics and mixed media into sculptural forms.

The presentation takes it inspiration from the re-interpretations of Iconic Art and Chinese ceramic wares of Yuan Dynasties, and the underlying symbolism and decorative imagery of that Era. Eloquently using symbolism of animals, figures and motifs to illustrate the forms and the underlying symbolism.

Inspired by historical ceramics, the desire to create a series of "Modern Day Artifacts" using humor to lighten the slight edginess of my work. Vessels that tell stories of Today’s Society: Global Warming, Sexuality, Violence are some of the themes illustrated onto these "Modern Day Relics ".

Part of the work submitted is the departure from functional ceramics towards more sculptural work. The mix of ceramics and mixed media allows the new possibilities of sculptural work and a certain lightness then working only in clay. New ways to create lines and details giving a newer perspectives to creating ceramic sculptural forms."

“... My "Environmental Awareness" series spotlights both nature’s astounding beauty and the impact humanity has on it. The focus of much of my work has been on water and the animal life living in and near rivers and oceans. Though I was familiar with the issues, my recent work with the NFWF further detailed the impact humans have on all aspects of the life-giving cycle of water. Often, we don’t realize many of our own contributions or the scope of their impacts. I chose to express these dissonant elements in the same way that they are created: quietly; there are merely hints of their existence, but their cumulative impact is huge. I want my pieces to appear as beautiful art at first glance. Then as the audience studies further, they find the hidden truths that are poured, seeped, or overtly dumped into our precious waters.

My hope for this series is that the viewers’ eyes will be opened and they will become conscious of their own contributions to these problems. On my website, I have added educational components, and tell of my own journey in realizing these issues. I am currently working with the NFWF to present this series publicly.”

ARTIST STATEMENT

There are two elements of thought that drive my artistic choices: the visual aesthetic which draws the viewer in through the layers of the painting; and the emotional connection between viewer and painting, born from the viewer’s own personal story.

These inner landscapes are evocative of an amalgam of places seen and experienced and their impact on my own life’s journey. They move beyond a rendering of a specific place and traditional style of painting into abstracted reality. I create a compelling invitation for the viewer to enter into an intimate and dynamic relationship with the painting, gaze into what they see and allow their own experiences to create their personal narrative. It’s the conversation between the viewer and canvas that invites them to find peace, serenity, and meaning in their own stories.

I’m driven by the universal fascination and draw to the horizon, sea, sky, and shore. The mystery of the horizon and the obscure and nebulous place where the sky joins the sea and where the line between the two is blurred. The mystery of what lies beyond the horizon – where our imagination of the unseen propels us to look further. What do we hope is there?

"I am an accomplished printmaker who, since 2020, has begun painting in oils. I pursue realism and technical excellence. My work is inspired by a sense of place: a journey away from the dullness of everyday life towards the tranquil feeling one gets when experiencing great art. Beyond that, the simple joy of creating and making something new is the inspiration for my work.

During my years as a printmaker, my inspiration came primarily from local historic stone structures and their surroundings which I depicted in black and white. As a painter, I have begun the exploration of color in all of its complexity, and as a result, I have broadened my work to include portraits and still lifes. I seek to explore the vast realm of color that was missing from my black and white work while maintaining the technical excellence and realism that characterized my printmaking. My still lifes are very traditional in subject matter, but they are less about fruits and vegetables and more about the joy of exploring a new medium and sharing that joy with the public."

“Born and raised in the USSR, I’ve been crafting during all my life, but it’s beading that became my key to the secret garden, my way down the rabbit hole, my looking glass. From the beginning the process of designing a new piece of jewelry has struck me as magical. And, over the years, that magical process has had its way with me, leading me from hobby to art. Beading fills me with a sense of accomplishment and integrity, and has proven a most amenable vehicle for translating inner vision to outer reality.

My passion to 3-dimensional shapes has fueled my creative spirit throughout my life. My choice of beadwork as a primary art medium has followed that same fascination. When evolving, my beadwork seems to always lean towards the building of shapes and forms that are functional and wearable. My friends call me "nature inspired" - that’s true!

I like blossoming trees and flowers in spring, geometric frozen shapes in winter, or watch beautiful colors during sunrise and sunset. Changing nature stirs my emotions, inspires me and captures my spirit. Beauty around is the charm filled with fortitude. I want to sing and do, and enjoy my life.”

This question leads to the interests about a human being’s value and humanity in current society and I make wearable sculptures for interactive projects with the public to remind them of their own values, or panels which have words or sentences related to subjects of interest.

As my visual language, I developed the idea to use the dots and codes of Braille to deliver meanings in language form, but also to create a visually decorative and abstract look. ”

“ My work combines, Trompe L’oeil; graphics, and Pop Art images with brilliant color. Since 1987, I have been creating Trompe L’oeil Illusions.

I was painting small objects, actual size, defining shallow space. My paintings became larger, depicting hanging garments because fabric has no apparent linear perspective and I could make deeper space. These hanging garments morphed into large paintings of curtains. Because most of my work is mural painting, I began using acrylic paint instead of oils and painting on mylar instead of canvas. I began to appreciate the hot press quality of the mylar and allowed the strie of the brushstroke to show. From the mural painting, I also have been painting on unusual surfaces such as doors and pillars. Some of my imagery moved away from Trompe L’oeil to include graphic imagery and portraits. Most of my work is mural painting and my goal is to segue to easel paintings. However, I have been influenced by the large scale of murals and use of acrylic paint. ”

“ The process of creating my paintings begins with my own perception of life, accumulating what I have observed in nature and recreating it with my interpretive passion. I prefer expansive natural landscapes and the little everyday wildlife that I come by, noting the beautiful ones that stick out in my memory. Much of it is likely an instinctive reaction, and I am more than willing to embrace what I find interesting to reimage it in an artwork. This is my interpretation of "the visual beauty". Anything and everything can be beautiful, and this beauty appears as a result of natural tendencies. Bringing people happiness and joy, more longing for the future in life to continue experiencing it – that is what I want other people to see and feel. In the past decade, I have focused my efforts on the theme of flowers and birds. Attending intensive outdoor expeditions, I now believe I can portray my subjects more intuitively, such that more people can be happy and enjoy the search for beauty along with me. ”

"The beauty, power, and the subtlety of the natural world is the main source of my inspiration, with water and trees forming the main subject matter in my artwork. I use botanical contact printed paper as collage, incorporating the natural patterns and colors created through the natural dyeing process as a subtle echo to the organic form of calligraphed text. My academic background researching bookbinding and manuscripts has inspired the use of calligraphed text, usually medieval hands. I free the calligraphed text from the linear and uniform constraints that formal calligraphy exhibits, stretching and altering the forms into organic patterns that form landscape shapes and color. I am also fascinated by the psychological engagement through the action of writing and find deep personal meaning in keeping the practice of calligraphy as a central part of my work. I also find the collaboration process of working with writers rewarding and challenging. I use several formats in my work, finding that the artist book format adds another layer of engagement for the viewer/reader. The tactile nature of book art encourages the viewer to have an intimate interaction with the art, exploring the book structure as part of the experience."

My paintings come from a place I call the space between, a place that exists between the seemingly ever-increasing stress of life as we live it and the high drama of the world as we know it, a place where you can still find light and whimsy, bright colors and patterns of joy. Painted layer upon layer and embedded with bits of collage, my figurative work is a celebration of everyday moments – a woman deep in thought or sitting with her dog, or a man with a bouquet of flowers. I rely on heavy underpainting to build the history and then scratch through to bring that past to the surface or paint a background with bits of the history left open to the present. Left faceless, and at times without clarity of gender, race or ethnicity, my figures are meant to excite the imagination and spark an internal dialogue by inviting the viewer to become part of the process and paint in their mind the final strokes.

"I view art as a language uniquely suited to serve us in ways a verbal language cannot, and to unify us in a unique way, despite the person's origin, culture, religion.

My art is a creative way of expressing my feelings and emotions, by utilizing fiber medium such as Tapestry and Silk Fusion. Through my work, I strive to portray the images I have seen, the emotions I have felt, whether positive or negative, and to give the audience the opportunity to interpret and experience my visual representations in their own unique way.

In my work I often use reclaimed materials such as fabric scraps, jute, left-over yarns or feathers. By using recovered materials, I want to send a message that art exists to save the world, humanity, and environment and not to destroy it.

My creative process often starts from small size painting, drawing or collage, however, I particularly enjoy the actual process of creating fiber work since I personally view it as a challenge of painting with yarn or silk fiber.

Fiber art, similar to other media, should make the audience think and feel as well as inspire them to think in a new way."

“Photography is an invitation. Accepting this invitation is a personal choice. Some of us mentally enter a photograph to marvel at line, color, and composition. Others are swept away by content, what the picture says to them, its historical or emotional message.

I fell quickly to visual arts as a child, fascinated early with drawing, then colors, textures, the way light plays and moves across everything. Especially gratifying were summer visits to the Black Sea in Ukraine, a wonderland of ever-changing and immutable nature.

However, photography was my true passion. My camera became my best friend and companion.

My focus on street life is driven by a philosophical desire to reveal, through implication and inference, as well as presence in absence, small glimpses of everyday life in everyday settings. I wander the streets with my camera, searching for photographic opportunities. Out of these experiences came my unique style of capturing the interplay of my subjects with their surroundings.

My photographs today are inspired by Sebastião Salgado, William Klein, and Josef Koudelka. I endeavor to document the events I witness on the streets.

My photographs invite the viewer to reflect on the feelings and emotions my subjects are experiencing.”

“ My ceramic work is mostly hand-built and raku-fired. The magic and unpredictability of raku are inspiring to me. I also love to work with found objects, recycled materials, and items from nature. Exploring the soul of things is part of what I try to do. I feel that things harvested from the waste of everyday life bring another layer to my work. A discarded and smashed car mirror or an abandoned nest has already lived one life. It is no longer useful as it was but it can bring just the right meaning when combined thoughtfully with other materials in a new creation.

It is important to me that my artwork is approachable. My work evokes questions such as: We have one planet, how can it best be shared and cared for in an equitable manner? And, What is a being that is worthy of our care and kindness? I hope that it brings joy as well as invites the viewer to think about tough issues in a gentle and hopeful way. ”

“Memories of people from every walk of life influence my work. I look for those quiet moments when their thoughts are least observed, a moment of quiet and introspection. These sculptures are my most abstract work; their large size and clean lines are designed to focus on this emotional introspection.

This is my vision, which begins as a mere shadow of imagination, finding expression and creation in the very natures of the materials I engage with.

Conceptual images assault my mind. When I sense something, my imagination executes the form before the physical work begins.”

You missed it, the perfect photograph! You didn’t have a camera, you left your phone in the car, you weren’t able to get a picture in time before the moment was gone. Not to worry, I got it for you. With so many things to keep track of in life it’s easy to miss special moments. I am constantly exploring the Washington DC area with my camera to capture its beauty, which lies in buildings, monuments, and people. Taking my camera with me everywhere I go, I am always ready to capture special places and moments in the most amazing of circumstances anyone might have been unable to capture themselves. I also do this because waiting for perfect conditions to take a picture will always be too late. I create the amazing moments to photograph by looking for them, rain or shine, cold or hot, early or late.

Sometimes the perfect picture only manifests because I am out and ready to take it. I then share these images online for the world to see and in print for a more in-depth look at what I was able to capture.

My art focuses on creating abstract and stylized stone, wood, clay and mixed media sculptures to embed particular themes and ideas, focusing on illuminating problems and stereotypes of modern-day society. Art is a universal language, therefore, in my artistic career, I put great emphasis on creating artwork with which I strive to find a common ground with everyone regardless of race, ethnicity, or religion.

Purpose of my works is not to lecture, but rather to convey certain messages, and to shed light on certain global themes and issues that I believe everyone should be aware of. By doing so, I would like to send a gentle reminder of both the positive and negative issues that unify us, hoping to remind humankind of just how much power they possess to affect such circumstances.

With my work I also hope to serve as a bridge between generations of artists that have come before me and will come after me."

“ I have lived and worked as a visual artist in five countries over 25 years, so it is only natural that my art reflects change. As a contemporary realist who paints landscape, still life and city scenes, my work mirrors the balance between calm permanence and tense transition.

For me landscapes have always meant mountains, having lived in proximity to them for many years. A decade ago, I felt compelled to focus on changing glacial areas and the alarming impact on ecosystems that scientists have warned about. Comparing my early photographs of glaciers to newer ones jolted me.

This recent series of landscape paintings focuses on the most changeable parts of the topography: upper regions above the tree line where the snow and ice form the accumulation zone for glaciers. I paint fragile textures of airy snow and sharp multifaceted blue shadows among massive blocks of ice. Ephemeral and solid at the same time.

Did I mention blue? Blues are the dominant hue in this work created with multiple custom mixtures of acrylic pigments. With dynamic compositions and painterly shifting value areas, I seek to suggest the frailty of massive formations bordering on imminent, catastrophic change.”

In addition to dynamic aesthetic, it is important that my work is as empowering as it is functional.

While my style, material, and clientele have changed tremendously over the last 20 years, I always consider durability, versatility, aesthetic, and self-expression when designing my pieces. "I like taking everyday things that many people don’t really think about and making those the focal point in my art. I work with circuit boards, CDs, ping pong balls, VHS tape, hardware, fabric, nail polish, plastics, beads, shells, rocks – actually anything that is intriguing or that inspires me to make an art piece (or series).

I really enjoy creating artwork for the visual as well as the tactile senses. Many people are tactile so having items that they can fidget, pet or play with can be very calming. A young woman who was blind stopped by my table at a market and was so thrilled that she was able to “see” my artwork with her hands! Because I use recycled materials and found objects, most of my work is colorful, playful, and fun. As a side-effect, my art builds awareness around the concept of reduce, recycle, reuse and I engage others to think more along those lines."

My artwork is an exploration of the expressive potential of different mediums and styles. I work primarily with acrylics and oils to create abstract compositions conveying emotions and sensations that are difficult to put into words.

My abstract work is influenced by nature and I use organic shapes and patterns to create compositions that are both striking and evocative. Through the interplay of different forms and textures, I aim to create a sense of movement and rhythm within each painting.

In my plein air landscapes, I strive to capture the essence of the scene, using loose brushwork and gestural marks to convey a sense of immediacy and spontaneity. I believe that painting outdoors allows me to connect with nature and my work reflects the energy and vitality of being immersed in the environment.

Finally, my use of calligraphy in my art is a reflection of my love of language and the written word. I enjoy the way that the flowing script can interact with the painted forms, creating a dialogue between different elements of the composition.

Through my artwork, I hope to inspire viewers to see the world in new ways.

Howard Averill is a studio-based oil painter that has always been fascinated by distant views, storm transitions, and other changing light conditions. His landscape compositions focus on moments where such changes impact the mood and the drama of the underlying scene. In addition to creating a familiar or desirable place, the pieces generate a curiosity that encourages exploration and discovery within the picture plane.

"Anomalous Renditions Studio ("AnRenStudio") is a journey of an obsession and fascination with problem solving, the fabrication process, and the representation of textures and materials.

These sculptures are explorations of abstract or biomorphic form. In most instances, the forms are freestanding, have limited surface contact and can be repositioned. This invites an interaction between the viewer and the form which facilitates alternative interpretations of what is being represented. I purposely plan something that creates visual or physical dynamic balance.

My inspiration is derived from architecture and nature; The human form and/or anatomy, aquatic life, plants, food, or combinations of each. In some instances, the materials and textures are replications and in others an unexpected result."

She received a BA in Art Education at Fairmont State College, W VA. in 1977 and a Masters in Interdisciplinary Studies in Art from Virginia Commonwealth University in 2009. Giovanna has thirty-nine years of Art Teaching Experience.

Capturing the play of light on a subject, city, building, or water inspires me. Looking from one space into another, observing subtle nuances in color, serpentine flowing lines that occur in nature really inspires me. Translating reflections from water or a reflective surface is provocative and demands to be executed onto a canvas. Italy inspires me, the people, the buildings, streets, flowers, food, the passion and dedicated hard work to excel. I have been influenced mostly by Caravaggio, Michelangelo, Albrecht Durer, Diane Tesler, Lynn Boggess, Susan Makara, Roberto Bernardi, and Raphaella Spence.

“ My paintings are created in layers. Layers of paint dragged across the surface with the media altered to create different amounts of transparency and viscosity in the paint. This process hides and reveals the artistic process. I plan my paintings very carefully in order to produce results that are random and chaotic. Things that are beautiful are obscured and things that are ugly are revealed and vice versa. There is a search for truth in the form of a vision that cannot be articulated in a definitive image, and so it is spoken in color, texture, and form. I create this work drawing upon themes that originate in historical art subjects and current events, and these along with my own ideas address the human spiritual condition in crisis. Crisis begets enlightenment, which then begets crisis. The satori we experience as individuals and collectively as human beings are the beneficiaries of calamity. My desire is to infuse my work with the energy of these events. I use color as means to document the metaphysical character of these crises as it rends and tears straining against the changes that unseat the soul and reveal the psyche within. ”

Over the past two years, my work has consistently involved slow and meditative processes. During the isolation of the pandemic, these meditative processes helped mark time as I layered and stitched. The stitched line retraces form and shape, making new connections, creating texture, and new pathways. Stitching and restitching, fragments, layers, repetition, identifying and giving form to shapes which connect and reconnect.

As in my piece Flow, the stitching, wrapping, immersing in dye, drying, unwrapping, pulling, and stretching, leaves part of the process invisible to the possibilities. Opening and pulling the stitched and bound areas unveils pattern, allowing the piece to flow down to the unopened corner flowing over the edge.

My curiosity about process, pushing the limits encountered with the textile techniques I use to dye, texture, stitch and present my work, provides me with a constant and exciting challenge. My inspiration comes from my travels to Japan and China and learning from the masters whose workshops I’ve been fortunate to attend to learn about technique, pattern, and design. Working with fabric offers me opportunities to create not only pieces that hang flat on the wall, but also can be formed into sculpture.

My dream of a calmer world drives my plein air painting practice as I strive to bring my audience a sense of serenity. As a military spouse, I’m constantly uprooted and have to establish new homes. Plein air painting allows me to make these new places my own. In each location, I find its beauty and tranquility and capture it in paint. My work is soft and quiet and culminates in a sense of emotional nostalgia.

Painting has made me more sensitive to the nuances of light, air, and texture which helps me more deeply experience the places I have lived and traveled, be it the breeze in the trees as the sun rises or the moon over the rooftops. In China, the crowds of people and the hustle of the city fell away when I painted in the parks. In Mongolia, as the sky and grasses stretched for miles I contained their vastness on a canvas.

These are the scenes I capture with my landscapes because they bring me calm and my goal as an artist is to bring that same tranquility to others. My work causes people to pause, slow down, and appreciate the beauty around them.

I am a landscape photographer.

I think of my work as chasing light. The difference between an ordinary picture of an extraordinary subject and a picture that truly moves me is the way the light absorbs and reflects off that scene.

It may seem that the intent of my work is focused on showing the beauty of the wilderness, but I really aspire to share the emotions I had when I was experiencing these magic places as I pushed the shutter button.

This pursuit involves thousands of miles of driving each year, then countless hours of waiting to see if the light transforms an already amazing subject into something ethereal. Then comes the challenge of making all the right technical choices to capture that scene in a way that allows the viewer to feel something from the picture.

It doesn’t always work. I’ve been to many locations five or more times and never made a lasting image.

I am heavily influenced by the work of Ansel Adams. I am also amazed by the work of 19th century landscape painters like Thomas Cole, Joseph Turner, and Frederic Church.

"Having lived most of my life in an urban setting, I feel a powerful attraction toward nature. In art school, I walked daily through a jungle of concrete and steel to our building, wedged between canyons of skyscrapers in the city. I escaped from the city and traveled to the mountains. Basking in the fresh air, I felt a rush of exhilaration. Exploring the forests of America has been a life-long form of therapy for me. Out in the woods, my mind stops racing. I bring my art supplies and I sketch. I look for scenes that capture my imagination: the infinite variety of textures, color, and the play of light. Back in my studio, I build compositions based on these adventures. My paintings have a narrative, story-telling component as they illustrate my own experiences as well as the journeys of other hikers. My current project follows the story of Hero and BAM! They are a pair of hikers who created a fund-raising project called ”Hiking for Hunger.” While hiking the entire Appalachian Trail, they raised awareness and more than $30k in donations for food insecurity in America."

“Most of my paintings consist of small squares, creating a mosaic-like effect. Each square is different - like words in a dictionary - and arranged on canvas like phrases and paragraphs in a book. This modular approach helps me establish unexpected visual rhythms. I see the world as coexistence of chaos and control, clarity and ambiguity, and boldness and subtlety. Each defines the other, as in the yin and yang of oriental philosophy. By using the same basic structure for each series (like a chapter in a book), I can concentrate on other elements of design by arranging vocabularies. Six or seven series are currently active, and my book has been expanded, revised, and revamped many times since I began working in this style in 2009.

Lines, colors, and textures are the three most important elements in my paintings as they engage me at the most expressive level. My childhood training in calligraphy echoes in my use of linear elements. I was born and raised in Japan and have worked most of my adult life in the Washington DC area. I am keenly aware of my own cultural heritage and search for ways to preserve it in my art.”

While playing with prime numbers as an inspiration for a funky grid pattern to layer into my artwork, I stumbled upon novel spiral patterns hidden in number progressions. The discovery made the hair on the back of my neck stand on end. I found the architectural hand skills I prided myself on were not precise enough to capture the required subtlety. So, I learned to utilize computer-aided design software to enhance my abilities. This technology allowed me to find expression in innovative visual approaches to number theory. So far, the resulting imagery has manifested into digital drawings on aluminum and video animations.

My work is inspired by the intersection of the natural and man-made worlds. Their boundaries and merging provide a continuous source of whimsical, haphazard, and spirited juxtapositions; boldness and quiet, roughness and smooth, items hidden and revealed, unplanned color and text. It’s a synthesis of my earliest forays into abstraction and subtleties gained while isolated during the pandemic.

I often work in series, an underlying structure that allows me to explore a theme or concept in depth. Through experimentation with materials and techniques, I strive to capture the essence of a moment in each piece. My goal is to create art that evokes emotion and encourages the viewer to contemplate their personal experiences with the natural and built worlds. By highlighting the temporal beauty and fragility of our surroundings, I hope to inspire a sense of responsibility and partnership with our planet.

"As per the criteria of classification in this application, I’m considered to be a mid-career artist. However, I believe the zen concept of ‘beginner’s mind’ is one of the most important aspects of my making process. Curiosity- about the natural world, the history of jewelry, and history in general, inspire me. The ancient concept of the amulet and the talisman has lead me to ask "What would modern amulets look like? How would they function?" Combining nontraditional elements and techniques with traditional jewelry materials has led me to ask "Why do we value some materials- gold, diamonds, etc.- and dismiss others?" Discarded industrial hardware, car reflectors, and thrift store finds can tell a story that can intrigue viewers.

I strive to improve my technical skills, and achieving technical and creative mastery of my medium is very important to me.

Conversations with other artists in various media have led me on a journey to explore other ways of seeing. My ultimate goal is to move beyond merely ‘looking’ to actually see- to observe, consider, and derive inspiration and joy from the the things and people I encounter every day."

“ I did In Vitro Fertilization for 5 years and now have a beautiful baby boy, Gabriel, just over a year old today. Through this arduous, pricey and painful process, and especially after the throes of the pandemic, I am all the more driven to show him what is precious: the amazing world we live in, full of natural wonders wherever you turn, if only you take the time to look. He is helping me see as much as I am helping him—he turns at the sound of each bird call; he sees the smallest fallen petal and bends to explore it.

What I feel and wish the most for now is grace: the gracefulness of these creatures swimming through the ocean, grace that they exist. Grace for myself as a new mother, finding time to paint between baby naps and weekly family crises. Grace for us all, because continuing to create and experience others’ creation is a lifeline that lifts us all from both the mundane and the unthinkable.

In this Grace series, I paint the exotic forms of oceanic creatures—jellyfish & nudibranchs. It’s amazing that something in our world can look so fantastical, but it really exists.”
